

Kilian Schönberger - Nature and Urban Photographer

I'm a professional photographer & geographer from Germany; born in 1985. My aspiration was always to cut my path as a photographer with an own creative perspective - despite beeing colourblind. I recognized that I could turn this so-called disadvantage into a strength, too and developed my own unique photographic view: e.g. while getting a picture of a chaotic forest scene, I can't clearly distinguish the different green and brown tones. Brushing aside this "handicap" I don't care about those tones and just concentrate on the patterns of the wood to achieve an impressive image structure. Currently I have two residences: one in Cologne and one near Ratisbona in Bavaria. My photographic work concerns the whole range of topics from natural landscapes to cityscapes. Remote rural areas are photographically as interesting as the lifestyle and architecture of urban melting pots. Both worlds fascinate me and so I try to capture my individual view of these changing and challenging environments. For landscape photography I prefer temperate and high latitudes and alpine landscapes. I like the harsh beauty of those areas and the peculiar melancholy that surrounds them. Regions which I am interested in are Norway, Iceland, the Alps, Scotland, the Pacific Northwest, Saxon Switzerland, Kamchatka, Patagonia, New Zealand, the Altai Mountains, Canada and Siberia.

My official partner for camera equipment is Nikon Germany. My website is: www.kilianschoenberger.de
